General Information

Short summary

Greek organic winery from the island of Lesbos producing premium terroir-driven wines seeks international importers and distributors.

Full description

Methymnaeos, producing award-winning organic wines made from the rare Chidiriotiko grape, is the first winery in the history of the Greek island of Lesvos. The Chidiriotiko is a variety grown in the island's volcanic soil.

Since 1985, the year of its creation, Methymnaeos has been a trailblazer in Greek winemaking, as:

- it revived the lost Chidiriotiko grape
- it created the first professionally made wine of Lesvos
- it cultivated one of Greece's first organic vineyards - the very first on Lesvos
- it was one of the first Greek wineries that opened their doors to visitors for wine tours
- it paved the way for the establishment of Protected Geographical Indication (PGI) Lesvos
- it created Greece's first orange wine
- it produced the country's first organic wine certified under EU regulations

Methymnaeos wines come in three distinct expressions: white, orange and red.

These wines stand out due to their:

- Unique Character, boasting exceptional minerality, thanks to the volcanic terroir of Lesvos
- Global Presence, with 62% of the winery's production being exported to demanding foreign markets, like Canada and Japan.

The company holds a registered EU trademark granted by EUIPO.

Advantages and innovations

Organic wines made from Chidiriotiko, a rare grape variety grown in the volcanic western part of the Greek island of Lesvos. Although the terroir is not widely known, the wines are produced in a way that makes them approachable and suitable for a broad range of consumers, including those who are not familiar with rare indigenous varieties.

Since 2024, Methymnaeos Organic Winery has been present in Asian markets such as China, Japan, and Taiwan. The wines are compatible with non-European cuisines, including East Asian and Indian dishes.
